

PRESS RELEASE

Following the cancellation of the Cannes film festival at its initial dates and a possible postponement, we wish to keep looking for, supporting and accompanying French and international independent cinema in movie theatres.

At a time where the fragility of the auteur cinema's ecosystem is going to be accentuated, the true sense of our action appears to be all the more necessary.

Every day that goes by makes us realise how much cinema and culture are essential in our coping against despair and isolation, as well as in rethinking a world that will inevitably be different tomorrow.

We therefore keep watching the submitted films for ACID Cannes as carefully and attentively as we owe it to those who carry on creating and resisting.

We don't know yet which form this programme will take nor when we will be able to announce it but we will try to be up to the situation so that the cinemas we love can carry on living.

Following the evolution of the health situation closely and consulting with institutions, professionals and the festival's sections, we will inform you of any new decisions.
